In 1785 he entered as an apprentice to the court printer Kurzbeck whose Hebrew types and business he eventually bought. He petitioned Emperor Francis II to obtain permission to become a printer and was granted permission on the condition that he supply the court with a copy of every book he printed.

Schmid, Anton von

He reprinted the books of Wolf Heidenheim, and, as he became prosperous, he enlarged his establishment to include Arabic, Persian, and Syriac books. His most significant Hebrew works were the Bible with German translation, the Talmud, the Hebrew periodical Bikkure ha-Ittim, the works of Maimonides and Judah Löb ben-Zeeb, and Jewish prayer books and catechisms.)

Conclusions—What's changed

- 1) RDA has caused us to relearn some of our most basic tasks.
- 2) More details required = more work, more research, more time-consuming.
- 3) Online resources help us formulate names.
- 4) We rely more on the cataloging community and new tools for information.
- 5) RDA is international and future-oriented.
