Dear AJL News Readers,

This issue is our first digital issue of the newly created AJL News. It replaces the news section of the printed edition of the AJL Newsletter. Although the format has changed, the content has not; in this issue you will find all previous sections such as chapter chatter, ‘have you heard,’ and news about recent and future events. The main item is an interview with our colleague Linda Silver on the occasion of her newly published book JPS Guide: Best Jewish Books for Children and Teens. Other items include a preliminary program of the Montreal convention (including registration forms) and preliminary data from the AJL Survey done by RAS and SSC presidents.

I know that for some of you it would take some time to get used to the new format. Please don’t hesitate to email me with any comments or suggestions at general-editor@jewishlibraries.org.

Enjoy!

Uri Kolodney

Dear AJL Colleagues, Exhibitors and Conference Attendees,

We invite you to the 46th Annual Convention of the Association of Jewish Libraries! The Montreal Committee has planned an incredibly rich program. The keynote speaker is noted Harvard professor and Yiddish scholar Ruth Wisse. Our sessions range from fundraising to how to manage a library without a budget; from Jewish books for tweens and teens to highlights from the Sydney Taylor book award; from teaching library skills using Judaic materials to Judaica classification schemes. And – as always, we will have our Awards dinner. There are sessions on archives, on digital collections and on the internet.

Montreal is well represented in the sessions, including a visit to the Montreal Jewish Community Campus to visit the Jewish Public Library and the Montreal Holocaust Memorial Center. Montreal authors are also well represented. There is an option to buy a ticket to attend a performance at the Montreal International Yiddish Theatre Festival.

The beautiful city of Montreal is an exciting backdrop to this thought-provoking opportunity to meet and network with old friends and new acquaintances. I hope that you will spend time in learning new ways to make your connection to the field of Judaic librarianship both personally and professionally satisfying.

On behalf of the entire Executive Board and Council of the Association of Jewish Libraries, I extend best wishes and appreciation to everyone who has worked so diligently to make this convention a success, and wish everyone an enjoyable and rewarding experience.

I look forward to seeing you in Montreal!

Sincerely,

Jim Rosenbloom

Jim Rosenbloom
President, Association of Jewish Libraries
Shalom and welcome to the first electronic edition of AJL News!

I would like to thank all the members who took part in the AJL Survey and provided us with data upon which informed decisions are made. Thank you for taking your time to help AJL figure out current trends in Judaica libraries, thank you for leaving insightful comments, thank you for helping us lead the way to a better AJL. Thank you! A big thank-you is also due to the Survey Committee and SSC President Joyce Levine, with whom I had the honor and pleasure to work on the Survey project.

While the full report, including many figures and full text of all comments, is too long for this forum, it will be released soon and be made available via the member-only section of the AJL new website. In the meantime, I’d like to share some interesting details regarding the RAS Division.

The good news is that the education level and professional experience of RAS respondents are spectacular: 73% earned MLS or MLIS degree, and 60% hold another graduate degree. As far as acquaintance with Hebrew goes, 46% read the language fluently, 30% can read with some comprehension, and 20% can read some – only 4% of RAS respondents don’t know any Hebrew. 23% have less than 10 years of professional experience in Jewish Studies librarianship, while 28% worked between 10-20 years in the field; however, the majority of respondents (41%) accumulated over 20 years of experience - and almost 30% of them are over 25 years in the profession.

The not-so-good news stems from the very same figures: 65.5% of RAS respondents are over 50 years old, and 39% are over 60. About 12% plan to retire within 3 years, while another 24% plan to do so in the next 4-10 years: this data suggests that 36% will leave the profession before 2021.

Drawing energetic members to our profession and to AJL activities is essential. Although participation rates in annual conventions in the last 5 years is pretty high among RAS respondents (65%), it is not enough. There are many other ways to participate: taking an active part in AJL chapters and national committees, being involved with AJL on the web (Facebook, Blog, podcast) and sharing your professional wisdom on the Wiki. Additional ideas for rejuvenating AJL and creating new leadership opportunities will be discussed at the 2011 Annual Convention, in a special session about leadership introduced by SSC President Joyce Levine and myself – we hope to see you there!

Another way to revive our aging association is to recruit new, younger members. I am happy to report that a new work group chaired by RAS secretary Michelle Chesner was established. This group is charged to develop curriculum for concentration studies in Judaica librarianship and to organize an active outreach program to MLIS students. Preliminary report from this group will be available at the annual convention.

With all my best wishes,
Rachel

SSC President

Joyce Levine, SSC President

Shalom! I’ve been swept up in the intricate workings of AJL since taking the position of SSC President, and I’d like to thank my SSC Vice-President Sara Ravid and Secretary Kathe Pinchuck, as well as my predecessor Marsha Lustigman for all their help. It’s a pleasure working with them and with AJL President Jim Rosenbloom and VP Heidi Estrin. So much effort goes into running the organization and this was certainly evident at the Board and Council Midwinter meetings in New York in January.

Many exciting developments have been taking place within the SSC Division. The AJL survey has great potential in pointing us toward future AJL decisions. RAS President Rachel Leket-Mor and I will be discussing the implications of the survey in a workshop on leadership at the upcoming Montreal Convention. A quick summary of SSC respondents reveals that 62% work in synagogues, 40% in schools and 5% in community centers. (Yes, many work in more than one institution!) Age, salary, experience and educational levels also differ among the various branches of SSC. Detailed statistics and feedback from the survey will be available soon on the new website. Many thanks to all who participated in the survey, and to my wonderful Survey Co-chair Rachel Leket-Mor.

The Accreditation Committee, under the chairmanship of Amalia Warshenbrot and Leah Moskovits, has been busy collecting applications for both new and renewed library accreditations. The Sydney Taylor Book Awards Committee headed by Barbara Bietz, and the Sydney Taylor Manuscript Committee headed by Atleen Grossberg, did a wonderful job selecting this year’s winners.

SSC has started an initiative to form relationships with and publicize AJLamongotherrelatedorganizations. This follows the lead of Suzi Dubin, Immediate Past President of AJL, who helped us achieve affiliation with the American Library Association. We plan to reach out to various synagogue movements and attend their conventions, demonstrating the value of Jewish libraries to those institutions and their leaders, including rabbis and administrators. We will also be making connections with educational and technology groups. This month, Suzi will represent us at the National Conference of Jewish Day Schools in Los Angeles. Each of us needs to stress the importance of the work we do and the continued support we obtain from AJL. If any of you have personal or professional relationships with relevant organizations, please let me know.

There will be so many interesting and relevant sessions at the upcoming Montreal Convention. I look forward to seeing many of you in person this June!

Best wishes,
Joyce Levine SSC-President@jewishlibraries.org
Ellen: You have a new book hot off the presses! Tell us the story behind the book.

Linda: When Norm Finkelstein, an AJL colleague and a talented writer of Jewish non-fiction, retired from his day job as a school librarian and became the editor of The Jewish Publication Society’s Guide Series, he convinced JPS that a guide to Jewish children’s literature was necessary. He asked me to write it. After a slow start, that’s what happened. Working with Norm, JPS’s superlative copy editor, Janet Liss, JPS editor, Carol Hupping, and their publicity director, Laurie Schlesinger could not have been a better experience! Voilà! JPS Guide: Best Jewish Books for Children and Teens.

Ellen: What is the Rule of Silence?

Linda: The rule of only saying something nice about children’s literature when so many books for children are – to put it nicely – not good. This is the reviewers’ challenge – to be critical and not merely polite.

Ellen: How do you define ‘best’?

Linda: In terms of Jewish books for children and teens, a “best” book has strong Jewish content, expressive and engaging writing, and imaginative, original artwork. It says something important about being Jewish and about being human to readers and says it in a way that speaks to a child’s intellect, emotions, and spirit. A best book usually raises more questions than it answers, it is authentic in that it approaches its subject or theme honestly, and it is written with energy, passion, and conviction. A best book takes readers from where they were when they began the book to a different place by the time they finish it. On the other hand, a “best” book is never trite or commercially vulgar; it doesn’t encourage materialism or narcissism, and rather than pandering to young readers’ more infantile impulses, it helps them confront the challenges of growing up to become committed Jews.

Ellen: How did you choose the titles in your book?

Linda: By reading, reading, reading. If it had been a while since I read a book I was considering, I re-read it. Some of the research and teaching I had done previously on Jewish children’s literature was helpful, especially the continuing education course I taught at an AJL convention and the yearly bibliographic essays written by Jewish children’s literature specialists in the now-defunct Jewish Book Annual. I consulted bibliographies, notable book lists, websites as The Jewish Valuesfinder and the Children’s Literature Comprehensive Database, and books about books including Bruno Bettelheim’s The Uses of Enchantment, Sharon Elswit’s The Jewish Story Finder, Penny Schine Gold’s Making the Bible Modern, and Jonathan Sarna’s JPS: The Americanization of Jewish Culture, 1888-1988. AJL colleagues with whom I consulted were generous with their time and suggestions. There is a dearth of writing about Jewish children’s literature, so I hope my book makes a contribution to a field that still needs considerable exploration.

Ellen: Did you find “kidlit” blogs helpful?

Linda: Generally, no. With a few exceptions, for example Barbara Krasner’s excellent The Whole Megillah, I find blogs to be almost as inane as the cutesy term “kidlit”. It’s fine for book lovers or writers to enthuse about books they love – that’s their right – but this type of writing isn’t very salient to an in-depth approach to the subject and some (most?) bloggers have only a superficial knowledge of Jewish children’s literature. Call me elitist, but I’m not much interested in knowing what a blogger gushes is a good read – excuse the expression – or what books are superlative because a blogger’s children like them. This fan’s approach isn’t one that I take; I don’t think it does the thoughtful consideration of children’s books by specialists any good at all.

Ellen: Did you find children’s literature criticism written by academics helpful?

Linda: Not usually. A lot of writing by academics is burdened by misplaced theorizing. For example, is it really useful to “de-construct” the classic Babar stories to reveal Babar’s communist tendencies or, on the other hand, to expose his alliance with the ruling class? This and far sillier has been done! This sort of criticism has little relevance, in my opinion, to the more down-to-earth yet much more interesting questions about books and readers that librarians discuss all the time in book reviews, at meetings and conferences, over lunch with one another. The writing of June Cummins, an academic, is a refreshing exception to most so-called scholarly writing that I’ve read. It’s informed by theory, but not overwhelmed by it and it addresses issues that illuminate and clarify books for young people.

Ellen: How can your book help librarians?

Linda: By helping them choose books to buy in order to build a collection that is balanced among subjects, age levels, and institutional curricula. By using it in combination with reviews of new books in the AJL Newsletter2 and Jewish Book World, librarians can develop collections, no matter what the size, that include books that every Jewish child should read and will want to read - before growing up.

It’s also useful as a guide to librarians’ own reading. The more Jewish children’s books they read, the more successful they will be in finding the right book at the right time for the right reason (your apt phrase, Ellen) to recommend to children, parents, and teachers. Best Jewish Books for Children and Teens is useful for program planning, story hours and book talks, for compiling bibliographies and for curriculum connections on particular topics that teachers need. The chapters are clearly labeled by subject; there are several indexes to help find books on a particular topic or for various age ranges. Many of the individual book annotations direct readers to other books on the same subject or by the same author. If in my own experience as a librarian I found that particular books were especially good for reading aloud or had some other special resonance with children, I mention that in the annotation.

Librarians’ skills are enhanced, I believe, by knowing something about the history or context in which Jewish children’s lit developed and they can learn some of it by reading the introductions to each chapter and by reading some of the works cited in the Notes. Personally, I love notes in books and often pursue them, adding to insights or knowledge that I’ve already gained from the book’s content.

Ellen: Is Jewish children’s literature on solid ground? If not, what does it lack?
Linda: I’m not sure that any literature written in book form is on solid ground. I suspect within a generation or two, most “books” will be read on electronic gizmos. To lovers of the physical book like me, that’s not good news.

More important, however, is the content. So long as that’s available, all is not lost! The content of Jewish children’s literature has become more eclectic with more subjects other than holidays. It reflects a wider variety of Jewish experience, from the secular to the frum, and it is less obviously aimed at teaching a lesson. Some of it even aims at humor, a quality that’s in short supply in Jewish children’s books. That’s all good.

However, a few recent trends are worrisome. One is the proliferation of illustrated books about the Holocaust aimed at young children. Most of these books trivialize the Holocaust as they aim to reach readers who not only have no historical background, but who do not need to know about the Holocaust in a period of their lives when innocence should be protected. Another is the substitution of national narrative for historical truth. This is often the case in books about Israel and the Palestinians and I deplore how some authors exploit children’s lack of historical knowledge and political perspective to advance a point of view that is based more on distortion, delusion or wish-fulfillment than it is on truth, accuracy, or balance.

Another thing is Jewish children’s book awards. It’s really important that members of the award committees have deep knowledge of the literature and a firm grasp of what makes an outstanding book. The reluctance of some of AJL’s best children’s book reviewers to volunteer for the Sydney Taylor Book Award committee means their expertise is not being shared. Being a mere fan of books is not enough of a qualification for an award committee member. Without critical expertise, judges can’t be counted on to choose books that truly merit awards. This diminishes the stature of the award and over time will relegate Jewish children’s literature to marginal status.

Ellen: How does co-editorship of the AJL Children’s section inform your writing?
Linda: Co-editing the Newsletter’s Reviews for Children and Teens, first with you and now with Anne Dublin, has been a wonderful experience. We aim for comprehensiveness in what we review so I’ve had to be ever alert to new Jewish or potentially Jewish books. We aim for well-written, professional quality reviews so I work constantly at refining my own writing skills as well as helping our volunteer reviewers refine theirs through good editing. It’s been gratifying to see how reviewers have grown in insight, writing ability, versatility, and enthusiasm. I don’t read all of the books that come to the Newsletter for review, but I read many of them. I do read all the reviews! I’ve gained knowledge of each year’s crop of books and an overview of the entire field of Jewish publishing for kids that I probably wouldn’t have gained in any other way.

Ellen: Can you name some of the people who have inspired you?
Linda: My library school teacher, Dorothy Broderick, who never met a controversy she didn’t like. The Coordinator of Children’s Services at Cuyahoga County Public Library, Margaret Skiff. Lillian Gerhardt when she was editor of School Library Journal. William Strunk and E. B. White, the authors of The Elements of Style, with its command: “Omit needless words.” Marcia Posner, for her encouragement of my writing. You, Ellen, for as long as I’ve known you and admired your intelligence, your wit, your distinctive style. Anne Dublin for her inner strength, lucid writing, and good judgment. Andrea Rapp for her intelligence, ahavas Yisroel, and integrity. Rachel Kamin and Kathe Pinchuck, who are both accomplished and promising and give me hope that the future of AJL is in good hands. And always, my AJL-Greater Cleveland Chapter friends whose support has never wavered, especially my former co-worker and dear friend, Bonnie Shapiro, a true eshes chayil.

Ellen: Linda Silver’s resume is outstanding, too long to fully recount here, as her insightful answers prove. I note high lights of her career since her MLS: 20 years of leadership offices of AJL national and her local Cleveland chapter; over 45 years as a Librarian, 20 of these as a Judaica specialist; and author of many publications especially two recent books: The Jewish Values Finder (Neal-Schuman) and the above noted Best Jewish Books for Children and Teens (JPS). 2 Editor’s note: the defunct Newsletter is now published electronically as AJL Reviews.
The People of the Book really do love libraries! In November 2010, during Jewish Book Month, 30 Jewish libraries participated in Library Snapshot Day. The event, sponsored by the Association of Jewish Libraries, was created to let all types of Judaic libraries record what happens in a day in the life of a library. Across North America, libraries in synagogues, day schools, community centers and universities picked one day during the first two weeks of November to hold the event. Collectively, participating libraries served 3,548 patrons on Library Snapshot Day.

The Activities
From Jewish hubs like Chicago, IL to smaller Jewish communities like Tulsa, OK, from sunny Miami, FL to chilly Montreal, Quebec, Jewish libraries held author visits, study groups, literary and computer quizzes, artist receptions, book discussions, book sales, scavenger hunts, craft projects, parenting programs, charity drives, and children’s story times. Eleven of the participating libraries shared their circulation statistics, revealing that at least 745 books were checked out during Library Snapshot Day.

The Feedback
Every participating library reported overwhelmingly positive feedback from its community. Common themes included praise for the library as a quiet, peaceful environment in which to read and work, kudos for the hard work of librarians (many of whom, apparently, “rock”), and appreciation for the many print and digital resources provided. A patron at North Shore Hebrew Academy High School in Great Neck, NY said “The library is a great place to study and clear your head. I always feel relaxed and very welcomed when I come to the library, and I love the librarian.” A sixth-grader at the Sheila Sporn Library at Valley Beth Shalom in Encino, CA said “Libraries are important because they let people who don’t have enough money get books to read.” A patron of the Brenner Library at Temple Emanuel in Denver, CO drives 150 miles from the mountains to make use of the facilities. Perhaps the general sentiments of library users are best summed up by a patron at the Feldman Library at Congregation B’nai Israel in Boca Raton, FL, who said “The library helps us to continue to be the People of the Book!”

The Snapshots
Library Snapshot Day captured the diversity of services offered by Jewish libraries and underscored the importance of libraries in Jewish life. “Libraries and librarians often fly under the radar in their communities,” said Association of Jewish Libraries Vice-President, Heidi Estrin. “We are thrilled that, on Library Snapshot Day, over three thousand people expressed their love of Jewish libraries. We hope that the event will encourage even more people to use these amazing resources year-round.”

News from the Chapter Relations Committee
A note from your editor, Toby Rosner

On behalf of the Chapter Relations Committee, I want to thank Irene Seff, who has recently resigned as the Chapter Relations Co-chair. I was the chair of this committee when Irene formed the New York Westchester Chapter and Irene hosted me when I traveled to Westchester to meet the area librarians and educators who would become the chapter’s charter members and to encourage their active participation. The moment that I met Irene I could tell that she was efficient and dynamic leader who would surely become an AJL National leader. I recommended her for the position of Chapters Chair when I moved on. Rather than tackle the job single-handedly, Irene recruited a nation-wide working committee that included the Chapter representatives on AJL Council. We know that she will approach her new projects with the same enthusiasm, dedication and skill that she invested in AJL’s Chapters.

Southeast Region
Submitted by Amalia Warshenbrot

The Southeast Regional Chapter’s inaugural meeting of North and South Carolina library chapters will take place at Temple Beth Meyer in Raleigh on April 3, 2011 at 3:00 p.m. Dr. Marc Bregman previously of HUC in Jerusalem, and husband of AJL-member Sara Friedman-Bregman will give a talk on the early history of Hebrew books. All local librarians are invited. For more information please contact Amalia Warshenbrot, AJL Southeast Regional Representative at amalaiam@att.net; (704) 365-3313. More information will be posted on Hasafran.

Atlanta Chapter
Submitted by Amalia Warshenbrot

Sheila Riegel, president of the Atlanta Chapter, welcomed the new chapter member from Hiller. She reported that the program at the Chapter’s December meeting included discussion on these relevant topics:

• The best ways for school libraries to manage their collections to insure that students chose age-appropriate material, especially from the Holocaust collection.
• Suggestions on how to encourage middle school teachers to use the media center included attending chapter meetings, preparing bibliographies based on the school’s curriculum, and hosting speakers on topics related to the curriculum.
• The pros and cons of relying exclusively on on-line periodicals.

Sheila notes that the Chapter is recruiting members from the local synagogue librarians. There is no membership fee.

Greater Cleveland Chapter
Submitted by Andrea Davidson

The Greater Cleveland Chapter enjoyed our annual Jewish Book Month Tea (a community-wide event) at Park Synagogue East. The speaker was Dr. Abraham Socher, editor of the new Jewish Review of Books. Dr. Socher, an associate professor at Oberlin College, explained his goals for the Journal, how he obtained funding, and how he secures such excellent contributors.

As in other years, the chapter compiled lists of the year’s best books of Jewish content for adults and for children and teens. This year the lists were produced in electronic format, which saved printing costs and enabled us to compile longer lists with more titles and more detailed annotations. Books included on the lists were displayed at the tea. The Cleveland Chapter’s lists can be found at www.greaterclevelandjewishlibraries.wordpress.com. The next chapter meeting is in March.

Florida West Coast Chapter
Submitted by Sylvia Firschein

Our Chapter has a new member, The Jewish Congregation of Sun City Center, where a committee has been organizing a library. The members of Florida West Coast Chapter are saving our duplicates and other books for their collection. Our Chapter held a luncheon meeting at the Sun City Center Synagogue on January 27.

South Florida Chapter (SFAJL)
From the Minutes of the December 2010 Chapter Meeting

The December meeting of the South Florida Chapter, hosted by Sue Kirschner, was held at B’nai Torah Congregation, Boca Raton. Sue introduced the attending members to the history of her library.

Sue, Heidi, and Lorelei participated in AJL’s Library Snapshot Day, and they discussed how the program went at their libraries. Heidi gave some background on the program* and handed out copies of the press release (which can also be found on the chapter’s website at www.sfajl.org). Heidi encouraged everyone, whether they participated or not, to use the results to promote Jewish libraries to “the powers that be.” (Please see the article on Library Snapshot Day on page 6 of this issue of AJL News for more details.)

Sue asked the attending members to discuss their publicity efforts.

• Her own example was how she used the library’s tenth anniversary as a milestone to promote the library. The library committee was honored with an aliyah during services, an article on the library was published in the temple bulletin, and a commemorative plaque was hung, not in the library, but in the hallway where it would be visible to the entire congregation. She also noted that many classes meet in the library — another excellent way to increase visibility.

• Walter related that Anshei Shalom named their library after a major donor and held a special presentation in that person’s honor at services. The librarians also sit on meetings of Sisterhood, Men’s Club, and other committees in order to promote the library.

• Lorelei said that at Dor Dorim the librarians display books on upcoming holidays or curriculum themes to help the teachers locate timely books for their curriculum. They also write book reviews for the temple bulletin.

AJL News February/March 2011
• Rita said that the B’nai Torah library has established a Frequent Readers Program for adults, giving certificates to top readers. This friendly competition inspires lots of reading. They also promote the library to new members.
• Jerry Glantz reported that he is at the final stage of writing his novel, a thriller about a terrorist who learns that he’s not Muslim after all. He will be happy to do presentations at AJL libraries once it’s finished.

Sue asked about book sales.
• Walter’s library has a table at the temple’s holiday bazaar.
• Sue includes a used book sale table in the school’s book fair.

They both agreed that holding a book sale at the same time as another large temple event brings more traffic and more shoppers. Heidi discussed the idea of setting up a low-key ongoing used book sale in a corner of the library or in some higher-traffic area like a lobby or office.

Southern California Chapter (AJLSC)
From the AJLSC Website
AJLSC held a program Know from Whence You Came on February 7 at the Los Angeles Family History Library. Speakers were Richard McBride, Director of the LAFHL; Barbara Algaze, Librarian for JGS-LA; and Sandy Malek, President, JGS-LA, who reviewed the major genealogical resources within the Los Angeles area, gave sources for locating records on your ancestors, and talked about how librarians can guide and assist others in genealogical searches.

Lisa Silverman* has published “It’s Christmas Time for Chanukah Books” in The Jewish Journal (December 3-9, 2010, print edition, p. 39, and in the Journal’s online edition.) In the article, she reviews two new Chanukah picture books and lists ten more Chanukah picture books (with annotations) — some take place in Israel, in the Antarctica, in Valley Forge.

*Lisa is Director of Sinai Temple Blumenthal Library in Los Angeles, and Children’s Editor of Jewish Book World Magazine.

Long Island Chapter (LI-AJL)
Submitted by Wendy A. Marx, Chapter President
Fall highlights of the Long Island Chapter include two visits to synagogue libraries. One of them was to Old Westbury Hebrew Congregation, where we shared ideas as to get more traffic into our libraries. Taken from a cue from AJL, both meetings were entitled Library 102. Some suggestions included: keep the library open on Shabbat, introduce a photo contest for books read, display an interactive bulletin board, hold board meetings in the library, encourage rabbi/cantor/school principal schedule meetings in the library. To encourage reading and a life-long passion for books, a representative from the PJ Library program explained how this wonderful program works. PJ stand for Pajamas; for further information go to www.pjlibrary.org.

We are pleased to welcome new members, including Sara Ronen, who wrote The Price of a Passport (www.sararonen.com) and Tobi R. Innerfeld, Director of Congregational Learning at Old Westbury Hebrew Congregation, who shared how she set up her synagogue’s children’s library complete with a SMART Board.

We were unable to arrange for a chapter bus up to the Eric Carle Museum to see its exhibit Monsters and Miracles: A Journey through Jewish Pictures Books; only two of us managed to get there! What a treat! As a lagniappe (an unexpected or indirect benefit), we got to visit author Richard Michelson’s (Across the Alley, As Good as Anybody) fabulous art gallery in nearby Northampton, Mass. (www.rmichelsongalleries.com)

We hope to run another bus trip to Amherst in the summer, including visiting the National Yiddish Book Center. Before then, we are busy planning our annual Public Librarian’s program, where our members review books with Jewish values content that are suitable for public libraries.

Looking forward to Montreal!

New York Metropolitan Area (AJL-NYMA)
Submitted by Rita Lifton
NYMA’s kickoff event for the academic year was the Fall Conference, organized by Roz Friedman, NYMA President, and held at the Center for Jewish History in New York City. The program opened with “Spinning Straw into Gold: A Twenty-First Century Library Transformation” (Sheila Beck and Devin McKay, Queensborough Community College). Queensborough Community College serves a population of over 12,000 students. When it became apparent that the two floor library was not adequately meeting student needs, the decision was made to create an environment conducive to both collaborative learning and individual study. Through a process of reallocation and redesign, a new space was created with a vibrant student centered atmosphere.

The second part of the conference, “Foundation to the Future: Construction of the North Instructional Building and Library at Bronx Community College” (David Koenigstein, Bronx Community College), was a discussion and presentation of the visual history of Bronx Community College, from its beginning as the University Heights campus of NYU and whose campus includes the landmarked Gould Memorial Library, up to the present day and the construction of the new Information Commons.

Optional tours of the Center’s concurrent exhibits followed the presentation portion of the conference. These included “Looking Back: Jewish Life in Morocco” (American Sephardi Federation); “The Art of the Book: Illustration and Design” (Leo Baeck Institute); “Oyf di Khurves/On the Ruins: A Chaim Grade Memorial Exhibit” (YIVO); and “Yiddish Schools in Poland: Creating the Culture, Awakening the Spirit” (YIVO).

Judaica Librarians Group (Israel)
Submitted by Yaakov Aronson

Since the last report from November 2010, three additional issues of the Judaica Librarians’ Group (Israel) Alon were published online. All issues can be accessed at http://safranim.wordpress.com. The editor is Rabbi Avivshai Elboim, Director of the “Rambam Library” - the Torah Library of the Tel Aviv Library System. The Alon contains short articles about interesting items, problems, etc., encountered during the daily work of Judaica librarians. Librarians from abroad are cordially invited to submit articles appropriate to the publication in Hebrew or English. They should be sent to Rabbi Avivshai Elboim at rambamII@gmail.com. Comments on published articles or suggestions are also welcomed at this email address.

The sixth issue includes articles in Hebrew about the appearance of the Ramban in a dream of the Hatam Sofer by Rabbi David Aronovsky, Director of the library at Yad haRav Herzog; A traveler’s diary: Report on the AJL Convention in Seattle by Rachel Misrati, Archivist at the National Library of Israel; An item “found” as the result of a lecture presented at the 3rd Study Day of the Judaica Librarians’ Group (Israel) by David Ben-Naim, Curator of the Rare Book and Manuscript Collection at Bar Ilan University.

Articles in the seventh issue deal with a definition of the term “information literacy”; examples of the importance of a wide knowledge of available sources, electronic and printed, in answering Judaica reference questions, and a critique of the Library of the University of Amsterdam’s online site reproducing the works published by of Menahshe ben Israel.

The eighth issue focuses on an exhibition of Hebrew books containing representations of angels held at Bar Ilan University’s Wurzweiler Central Library. An opening ceremony included short presentations on the subject and two of them are reproduced in the Alon.

David Benayem, Rare Book and Manuscript Curator at Bar Ilan and the exhibit’s curator, addressed the question “Why angels disappeared from the title pages of Hebrew books and lost their importance in Jewish theology”. Prof. Meir Bar Ilan of the Bar Ilan Jewish History Department spoke about The Graphic Representation of Angels. A PowerPoint presentation of items in the exhibition is also included.

A third article by Nahum Zitter, Head of the library at Yeshivat Kerem BeYavne (KBY) and a member of the Hebrew Cataloging Department at the National Library of Israel wrote a critique of the Internet site Hebrewbooks (www.hebrewbooks.org).

A study day about rare books was held by the Judaica Librarians’ Group on November 3, 2010. Hosting the day was the National Library of Israel (NLI) in Jerusalem. Over 60 librarians from fifteen institutions attended and the program was chaired by Haim Levy of NLI, Chairman of the Judaica Librarians’ Group.

Yitzhak Yudelov, retired director of the Institute for Hebrew Bibliography at NLI, spoke about What Makes Incunabula an Incunabula. He mentioned a few special characteristics of incunabula, differentiating them from later printed books: they have no title pages, but include colophons like manuscripts; the pages are not numbered; printers had a personal “relationships” with the works produced (an example given from a colophon was an apology by the printer for mistakes that crept into the work when he was sick and again when he was away at his daughter’s wedding).

David Ben-Naim, Curator of the Rare Book and Manuscript Collection at Bar Ilan University talked about How to Define a Rare Book. A number of criteria were mentioned, an interesting one being that though when talking about rare books one usually thinks about something old, if only a few copies of a newer edition of a certain work exist it might be rare and the older edition not.

Dov haCohen of the Ben Zvi Institute discussed Identifying Unknown Authors of Books in Ladino. One familiar with the entire milieu of an era can find hints to the author’s name or can correct previously incorrect information relating to an item. To demonstrate this, an example was drawn from a Ladino work published in the Ottoman Empire. The publisher was thought to be S. Salim. Preceding the “publisher’s” name on the title page was a four letter abbreviation which, to those with an extensive knowledge of the period, would know meant approximately: Published during the reign of the Sultan Salim.

Closing the day was a panel discussion titles “Is a Rare Book Collection Important in the Era of Digitization”. Panel members were David Ben Naim, Dov haCohen, Prof Elhanan Adler (who holds too many positions in his retirement to mention here) and Orly Simon, Director of Public Services at NLI. Orly Simon opened the discussion by raising the question: which digital “publications” does a library collect? Prof. Adler added the comment that all are “rare” because only one copy of each exists. The discussion raised issues such as the importance of variations in different copies of the same work which are not available from a digitized copy; unclear pages in the original which may be reconstructed by seeing it in the original; the question of watermarks, ruling, etc., all of which can’t readily be discerned from a digitized copy. And of course there’s the different feeling one gets from holding a printed book, which in itself might be an artistic creation, as opposed to seeing the material on a computer screen or even reading it from a computer generated copy.
On the business side, at a meeting of the group’s Steering Committee a discussion was held about sponsoring a Rabbinic cataloging course for non-professional librarians who are in charge of the libraries at yeshivas, ulpanot, Beit Ya’akov schools, etc. At present a canvass of these institutions is being made to determine if there is sufficient demand to justify such a course.

Anne Dublin’s historical fiction book, The Orphan Rescue, has been named a finalist for the 2010 National Jewish Book Award for Children’s and YA Literature.

Anne Dublin has created a teacher’s guide for her historical fiction book, The Orphan Rescue (Second Story Press, 2010). The guide contains a summary of the plot, questions for each chapter, extension activities (reading and writing, speaking, research, art, music, drama, cooking, and media literacy), and a short biography of the author. To see the guide, go to: http://secondstorypress.ca/system/files/17/original/The_Orphan_Rescue_Teacher_s_Guide.pdf

On Sunday, April 10, 2011, the Poppy Seed Players at the Kaufman Center in New York will present a world premiere of Shlemiel Crooks, a new musical based on two books by AJL member Anna Olswanger: Shlemiel Crooks, a modern-day Passover folk tale, (which AJL designated a Sydney Taylor Honor Book), and Chicken Bone Man, the story of a young blues pianist. In this modern-day Passover musical, the ghost of Pharaoh tries to sabotage Passover by stealing the wine from Reb Elias’s kosher wine store. Narrated by Jerry, the family dog, and featuring a couple of dimwitted crooks named Burt and Ernie, this hilarious but warm-hearted new musical about the importance of family loyalty and the need to follow your dream features songs by Scott Ethier and Clay Zambo and a script by Sean Hartley and Bob Kolsby.

For information about the musical, please visit: http://kaufman-center.org/merkin-concert-hall/event/popper-seed-players-shlemiel-crooks.

Constitutional changes suggested and approved at the January 2011 Council

Respectfully submitted by Joy Kingsolver, Parliamentarian

At Midwinter, January 2011, Council voted to shift beginning of the membership and fiscal years from July 1 to October 1. There were several reasons for this. As our treasurer, Sheryl Stahl, explains:

Every year, a huge chunk of our expenses occur during the two months before convention and continue for the month or two after convention. Since the convention is held at the end in June (or July), this makes it very difficult to close the books and prepare the budget. It would make much more sense to have the convention be more in the middle of the budget year so that all the income and expenses relating to it will be more easily “caught” in the budget.”

The membership year and the fiscal year coincide to facilitate record-keeping and avoid confusion. In addition, Yossi Galron, membership chair, explains that many institutions work on an academic year and that many membership renewals are delayed until the school year has started.

Our treasurer also notes that this will have no effect on our tax year, which runs from June 1-May 31. The tax year is not connected to the fiscal year or the membership year, and is not specified in the AJL constitution and bylaws.

Below are the passages from the bylaws which contain proposed changes. Existing language has been crossed out and proposed language written in. A vote will take place at the General Membership Meeting on Wednesday, June 22, 2011. All members in good standing will be eligible to vote at this meeting.

AJL Bylaws

Section 4. Dues remitted after April 1 July 1 shall be applicable to the following year.

Scholarship Fund

Prepare another for a livelihood...

Our Talmud in the Tractate Kiddushin tells us that a father is obligated to teach his son a trade. It is incumbent upon each of us to help prepare a student for a profession and, at the same time, promote Judaica librarianship. We can do this by supporting our scholarship awards. Remember, any amount is appreciated.

The AJL Scholarship Fund awards two scholarships of $1,000.00 each year to talented library science students who show an interest in pursuing a career in Judaica librarianship. For each gift, an acknowledgment card is sent to the appropriate person. It is a very meaningful way to recognize simchas, send donations in memory of a deceased, or make a donation for a speedy recovery. Send your contributions with the appropriate information. Please remember to include the address of the family of those honored or remembered in order that we can notify the appropriate individuals.

Please complete the form below and send it, along with your donation, to Sarah M. Barnard, Serials Librarian, Hebrew Union College-Klau Library, 3101 Clifton Avenue, Cincinnati, OH 45220.

A thank you goes to each and every donor!!

Attache ta tuque!

Get ready! Fasten your seat belts! (Literally: Pin your tuque on your head because things are going to get crazy). Over the next few months the Montreal Convention committee will be helping to prepare you for your trip to Montreal. Here is the first installment prepared by Karen Biskin of the Jewish Public Library.

The Montréal bagel, in its chemical breakdown:

“Montreal is the centre of the bagel world, because here we do it right. For just 180 calories and virtually no fat, you get splendid flavour, unique texture and a dose of history. To make this gustatory and health marvel, you don’t start with just any flour; you use flour rich in two proteins - glutenin and gliadin. These long, coiled, tangled molecules unfold and line up in long strands when kneaded with water. They also forge cross-links with each other, building a network of proteins known as gluten, which gives dough the elasticity it needs to rise as yeast generates carbon-dioxide gas.

A small amount of sugar is added to the dough to serve as food for the yeast, and a little egg for colour and flavour. The kneading technique is critical because it creates the air pockets into which the carbon dioxide will expand. The number of these air cells will contribute greatly to the final texture. Furthermore, oxygen in the air, introduced during kneading, strengthens the gluten by promoting a chemical reaction that forms sulfur, which links between adjacent protein molecules.

What makes a bagel a bagel, however, is not the flour, nor the kneading. It is immersion of the hand-formed rings of dough in boiling water prior to baking. Starch molecules in flour are coiled together in tiny granules, but hot water penetrates the granules and causes them to swell. Then the swollen granules muscle their way into and strengthen the molecular scaffolding created by the gluten proteins. A classic, chewy bagel is the result.

Furthermore, the boiling water is not just any water - it has to have a little dissolved honey. That’s because in the heat of the oven, the sugars in the honey combine with proteins in the dough to form the shiny brown crust prized by bagelites. Ah, the oven. You can’t make a proper bagel without a wood- burning oven. The smoke adds to the flavour, and the burning wood provides just the right temperature. During baking, gluten coagulates and starch completes its gelatinization. If the temperature is too low, the dough will expand as the volume of trapped gases increases, but will then collapse because the gluten and starch have not set. If the oven is too hot, the setting takes place too soon and the dough does not gain enough volume.

It’s a touchy business that needs an expert hand. A Montreal hand.”
